The Pictorial Review Of Last Five Years

The impressive record of growth and development which has marked the last five years in the history of Dauphin Island has been variously narrated in the last three issues of the Dauphin Island News.

In order to completely document these formative years in the Island's progress from an untouched and little-known island outpost for occasional sportmen into a resort area of national importance, this issue of the News is devoted to a pictorial presentation of the happenings of the last half-decade.

Herein we will find pictures of the earliest dredge activities, the first beginnings of the bridge construction, scenes from early expeditions to the Island by various parties who were instrumental in developing the master plan of work, panoramas of the Island as it appeared before work was begun and many other shots of equal interest.

Many of the pictures will show persons who partook of activities on the Island during this period, such as Rodeo three years ago, etc. In most of these cases accurate identification by the News staff is no longer possible, but it is felt that many of the subjects will be pleased to see themselves included in this historic issue, even anonymously.

This pictorial report will conclude our review of the last five years; years of great importance in the Island's history. Along with the issues just preceding, this document will be of increasing interest as the years advance and the records are lost.

The pleasure with which the News staff has worked on this research is matched only by the promise of greater things to come in the years ahead. With clear assurances of future growth already a matter of record we take this opportunity of inviting one and all to closely follow each new step forward through the pages of the Dauphin Island News.

HISTORICAL NOTES

During Governor L'Epinot's term, 24 tribes sent Indians on diplomatic missions to sing their calculus to the new governor. The Chickasaws, who were never once in all their history, defeated in battle, sent representatives from Tennessee. The Natchez, the Osage, and the Tunica came from the Mississippi. The Natchezes came from the Red River, and the Catawbas came from the Carolinas. They sang and danced for three days in the immortal Dauphin Island Calumet. It lasted close to three months, the whole affair.

In 1719, great numbers of Indians came again to Dauphin to protect the island against the Spanish in the war between France and Spain. Although it was a war between the two nations. In a surprise attack, the French captured Pensacola. The 1186 Spanish prisoners were transported to Havana, where the Spaniards seized the two French ships. The Spaniards returned to Pensacola and recaptured the town, making Chalmette a captive.
